

Attitude of a Servant

Being a servant requires a mental shift and a change in our attitudes. God cares more about our attitudes than our achievements. Think heavenly vs. earthly. Real servants have the following attitudes:

- Focus on others
When we forget our needs, we are able to focus on others and take care of their needs. Self-denial is the foundation of servanthood.
- Think like stewards, not owners
Servanthood and stewardship go hand in hand. You cannot serve God and serve money—it's impossible. Real servants remember that God owns it all and He expects us to be good stewards of His gifts.
- Focus on their ministry/mission
Real servants are too busy doing the work that God has given them to focus on or critique other ministries. We must remember that we have a common goal, doing God's work, and that competing with each other is nonsensical because we each have different gifts.
- Base their identity in Christ
Servants don't need accolades to validate their work. They work for the Lord and it is His approval they seek.
- Think of ministry as an opportunity, not an obligation
Servants enjoy helping others and serve the Lord with joy.

Take a moment to imagine how much good could be done if just 10% of all Christians committed their lives to become servants of God. Are you ready to commit? If so, contact Dorian Cornelius at 281-485-7833 to see how you can use your God-given gifts in ministry at Epiphany.
